What's App With You?

by Joshua Lepage

Urban Dictionary: This infamous website has its finger on the pulse of English slang, and the app makes it super easy to check definitions on the go. From obscure internet terms to urban slang, the app covers thousands and thousands of words. It also allows you to use many of the website's features, including voting for definitions you like, sharing words on social network sites, and seeing the Urban Word of the Day. Any ESL speakers who stumble into slang they don't know in songs and movies or during casual conversation should definitely give this one a try.

Crosslogic Unlimited: Also known as griddlers, picross, and nonograms, these hanjie picture logic puzzles were actually created in Japan. The idea is somewhere between a sudoku puzzle and a paint-by-number picture: by filling in a puzzle grid surrounded by sets of numbers, you'll slowly reveal a pixelated drawing. It may sound easy, but quite a few of the puzzles can be head-scratchers, especially the larger ones. Crosslogic Unlimited has managed to come up with an simple, colorful interface that makes it easy to fill out the puzzles. They're perfect for 10-minute breaks, and even if you manage to get through the hundred of puzzles included in the free app, there's a thousand more waiting for you if you have one hundred yen to burn.
